Forecast for Sunday 08 Aug 2021

Weather: Cloudy during the early hours of Sunday morning, however a band of organised showers will push in from the west reaching the park before dawn. The rain will be showery in nature with some heavier bursts early morning before clearing east before midday. The cloud should break a little during the afternoon however showers, locally heavy and with a risk of thunder developing at times. Showers tending to ease back with long clear spells developing from mid-afternoon.

Chance of cloud free mountain/hill tops above 600m: 20% rising to 70% from late morning.

Visibility: Poor as the showery band passes through the morning, with cloud obscuring tops above 400m. Visibilities improving from late morning to give some good views between any showers, but quickly falling to poor during any showers. Cloud bases rising in the afternoon to 900m, but still with temporary drops to 600m in association with passing showers.
